Coding Projects

- CRAN package During my 2012 sabbatical I wrote an R data mining package for discovering non-linear associations between variables in a dataset. Read https://journals. plos.org/plosone/article?id= 10.1371/journal.pone.0151551 for further details.
- Deep Learning with Julia During 2018 I developed a textbook that teaches Deep Learning using the Julia computing ecosystem. The current version of the text is available online https://hughmurrell. github.io/DeepLearningNotes/ index.html.
- Covid-19 tracking During 2020, I constructed a Julia script to compute Rt estimates at scale from global data sets. This script updates nightly and allows users to compare Covid outbreaks from region to region. Results can be viewed here; https: //reproduction.live/world
- PacBio Pipeline In July 2021, I started supporting the high throughput PacBio pipeline, PorpidPostproc Initially the client was Carolyn Williamson from the HIV Diversity and Pathogenesis Group at UCT. Later, James Mullins from the University of Washington, Seattle and Morgane Rolland from the viral genomics section of US military HIV research programme (MHRP) in Washington joined my customer base.

PorpidPostproc is a suite of Julia scripts that run under the SnakeMake system. The Julia scripts use packages from the Murrell lab to perform, demultiplexing, filtering and UMI analysis to obtain sequence populations from HIV patients.
